Haraldshaugen is a national monument in Haugesund. The monument was erected during the millennial celebration of Norway's unification into one kingdom under the rule of King Harald Fairhair.

Haraldshaugen commemorates the Battle of Hafrsfjord which commonly dates to the year 872. The Battle of Hafrsfjord has traditionally been regarded as the point in which western Norway was for the first time unified under one monarch. Tradition holds that Haraldshaugen is the burial site of King Harald I, who died circa 933.
